

Crime Does Not Pay

His vision was blinded by the flickering blue and red light, he felt his ears bombarded by sirens of justice, which was a sound that would haunt him for the rest of his life. As his head was slammed against the icy cold wall, he was pushed into an abyss of contradiction. He thought to himself, "Am I wrong? No, I was just trying to live in a cruel world cruelly". Whatever the answer was, he was still put in the icy handcuffs.

Yes, the world is not a utopia as it is always filled with good and bad. However, somehow Bryan got all the bad things in his life. Living in the slums, Bryan learned to earn money using the hash way. Robbing, scamming and fighting have been part of Bryan's daily life since he was a child. Even back home, the only image Bryan could see was needles upon needles and drugs upon drugs lying around the house. There is no doubt that Bryan's plight was a miserable one.

While Opium is widely used in the medical field, Bryan decided to stay on the dark side of it. Every day, Bryan would go around to the back lane, trying to sell packets of opium. The drug dealing process was simple yet secretive enough. He would walk up and pretend to bump into someone. But it was just this simple bumping that helped Bryan earn thousands of dollars and ruined thousands of people's lives! He always told himself: "It was their choice to buy the drugs."

With the money earned, Bryan was able to buy flash accessories and flashy cars. But little he knew, all of this would turn into nothing. It was a normal day and Bryan had just sold a packet of opium to a customer. However, something was off about the customer. The customer was energetic and the concise conversation he held with the customer was nothing like a conversation with a drug addict. The next he knew he was surrounded by six police cars, forming a barricade that even an ant could not escape. Bryan was devastated.

Now, Bryan had to spend the rest of his life behind bars, lying on the concrete floor. He finally had the answer: "I am guilty and regretful for what I have done. It's time to turn over a new leaf and never repeat the mistake in life."
